JEAN LOUIS ERNEST MEISSONIER

Only fifteen years old when he arrived in Paris, Meissonier, after a few months' study with Léon Cognet, turned to the study of the old masters, especially the Dutch, whom he learned to surpass in skill of detail, although he never became their equal in color. Without poetic temperament or large pretensions towards the ideal, he won his way to fame by conscientious, incessant toil. He had, as Albert Wolff has said, "the sincerity and wonderful determination of a man who leaves nothing to chance; who never loses sight of nature, and who makes no account of time when it behooves him to carry on a work to the pitch of perfection which the artist desires." Yet, while untiring in his accurate rendering of the material part of his pictures—the costumes, architecture, bric-à-brac—he reveals also the very spirit of the scene, with a wonderful power of establishing a central motive in his pictures which strikes the eye at once and holds fast the imagination. And these qualities are as noticeable in the smallest panel as in those large compositions treating the epic of the First Empire, of which "The Retreat from Russia in 1814" is the masterpiece. He was the recipient of the highest honors in his own country; a member, also, of the Munich Academy, and honorary member of the Royal Academy, in London, and of others. He died January 31, 1891

JEAN LOUIS ERNEST MEISSONIER

Born at Lyons, France, February 21, 1815; died in Paris, January 31, 1891. In 1830, Meissonier went to Paris and studied four months under Léon Cognet. He formed his technique mainly, however, upon careful study of the Old Masters—particularly those of the Dutch school

J. B. C. COROT

Jean Baptiste Camille Corot was born in Paris, 1796, the son of a prosperous tradesman; pupil of Michallon and Victors Bertin, and traveled in Italy in 1826. Traveled much in France, painting from nature and creating a style out of his experiments. Although at first neglected by the public, his patrimonial fortune enabled him to live comfortably and paint to suit himself. He received medals 1833, 1848, 1855, 1867; was given the Legion of Honor in 1846, and became an Officer in 1867. He died in Paris in 1875. The influence of Corot on the art of our time cannot be overestimated. He lifted landscape painting into the realm of idyllic poetry, just as Rousseau gave it a tragic, and Diaz a romantic significance. Each man painted according to his feelings. The spirit of the south which burned in Diaz, the melancholy of an unhappy life which darkened Rousseau, was replaced in Corot by a genial gayety of temperament which reflects itself in his works
